5/18 Kidus Nigam - investigating dome issue

Dome is not rotating - motor seems to function properly, but something physical seems to be blocking the dome... investigation underway

OBSERVATORY CLOSED
FOR NOW ☹️

5/18 - midnight Simeon Rader

Joined Kidus in his investigative mission. Sadly it's truly broken. We just came from the Museum of Natural History for a senior week event - 'twas nice. Hope the dome gets up and running soon.

Welp, I just graduated... that quote from The Office has ~~never~~ never been more relevant

"I wish there was a way to know you're in the good old days before you've actually left them." - Andy

STARR, since freshman year, has given me so much and has been one of the single best experiences at Hammond. I hope I have served it well this year and honored the work of previous boards. And I hope this org continues to change people's lives and put a smile on their faces. Nothing unites us more than the love for space.

Ad Astra,

There's just something about being in here... the endearing clutter of a very old, very loved space, filled with various odds and ends that each hold their own secret histories. The murals sprawled over every available surface — and that's before even ever laying eyes on the telescope. A colossus both from another time and not, inflated with the tang of hundreds of hands examining the same space, spread across time, the smooth, graceful, elegant swirling (on only one of its axes). Somehow the fact that I spend so much time wrestling with the scope & stars only endears me to them more — they have so much personality, and I'm really quite fond of them both, amidst their creases and grooves.

and when you finally plug in the cord, killing the lights, and ~~flipping~~ flipping that positively delightful switch, watching the dome creep even further open, revealing a tantalizing peek at the stars ahead. The warm, steady rumbling as it trundles around, opening the perfect sliver of sky, and then there comes the ladder and the loomis michael, creaking and squeaking and eager to meet with their beloved stars once again.

the casual selection of a pinprick, beating bright against the wash of artificial light, the fine adjustments and tweaks and squinting & bending, and measuring, all finally culminating in brightness washing over your vision. Saturn, nestled in its rings like a warm safety blanket out in the dark, Jupiter, ~~gliding~~ guiding a trail of moons like little ducklings, ducklings, all of them rushing off in such a hurry to take care of their business best of luck!, I wish them, ~~watching~~ admiring the way the lenses blur everything into opalescence —

It doesn't feel real; the gentle wind, the soft static of distant traffic, the shifting ~~static~~ carpets of light as the moon ventures ever westward, and all the while, my constant companion, the music I select.

You taught me the courage of stars before you left how light carries on, endlessly, even after death with shortness of breath, I'll explain the infinite how rare and beautiful it is to even exist

11/20/2022 Casey - Improvised a fix for the finder scope focus knob issue! Just don't be too aggressive in turning the knob/ extending it to the max and you should be fine. Tested the burnt out lightbulbs - one of the corner ones definitely has a functional circuit, but the one in the motor housing has bad circuitry. Not just a burnt-out lightbulb. Feels bad.
